

COURSE OVERVIEW

Course description: This course is designed to help students understand the impact of globalization on public communication and its audiences, that is, to understand communication in a globalized environment.

The course examines communication in the context of globalization and the factors at work at the interface between the international community and the media. It provides insight into the real world in which the media operate. It identifies the political, economic and social actors that influence the elaboration of content and the design of strategies, in a global as well as local scope.

Some of the major issues of globalization are discussed. What is at stake? Who are the main actors? What are the implications of globalization for the media industry and for media users? How do new technologies influence and change communication? How do political, economic and social actors interact with the media to influence the flow of news, entertainment and advertising?

** Spelling and grammatical accuracy will be observed in all tasks and tests.

Correct spelling and grammatical accuracy are to be observed in all written tasks and examinations. The evaluation of such activities take these requirements into account.

** Plagiarism is totally prohibited (including assignments totally or partially created using AI)

The School of Communication advocates the ethical use of documentary sources and ICT resources. For this reason, any and all forms of plagiarism are completely unacceptable in this subject. Plagiarism will be penalized across all tasks: projects, exercises and examinations. Plagiarism is defined as the whole or partial use of textual, graphic and/or audiovisual content produced by a third party without crediting the original author(s) (that includes generative AIs). Likewise, any form of fraud, deception, pretense or falsification aimed at improving one's academic results by illicit means will be penalized (including the use of an AI in order to improve your linguistic skills).

Academic projects that draw on books, articles, films, websites and/or any other documentary sources should include a complete list of works cited. The style guide of the American Psychological Association \(APA\) is to be followed in this regard.
