PRESENTATION

Brief description: The course in Transnational Commercial Law will explore the set of principles and rules, from whatever source, which governs international commercial transactions and is common to legal systems generally or to a significant number of legal systems. Over the past three decades the growth of transnational commercial law has been powered by a series of international conventions and protocols, model laws, restatements and contractually incorporated rules of international institutions, all designed to harmonise conflicting laws or business practices so as to ensure that all participants, in whatever country they may be, play by the same rules.
