

INTRODUCTION

Course Description:

International Relations is an interdisciplinary subject of study that is usually approached through history, political science or law. International Relations theory, however, perhaps constitutes the only corpus of literature that provides the subject of International Relations its distinctiveness. Therefore, this course which attempts to provide an overview of the various theories of International Relations is arguably the most important course in the study of international relations.

In today's world, there is no scarcity of information, there is, in fact, what is being called a "data smog". With such overwhelming access to information, it is critical to have the tools to sort through these facts and to make sense of these facts. Theory in general, and specific to IR serves the same purpose. It helps understand and explain various international phenomena by providing us with unique lenses to sort through the facts. The course will attempt to provide the students with a detailed overview of the various schools of IR such as Realism, Liberalism, Marxism, Constructivism and other post-positivist schools of IR. By the end of this course the students would have made a self-informed and deliberate choice amongst the various schools of IR, which will shape their understanding of the world. The course will seek to explain the various schools of IR through the analysis of past and current international events thus making the subject application oriented. This will provide the students with very practical tools that will come to their aid in real life scenarios and work environments. The objective of the course is also to hone the critical and analytical skills of the students while providing them with the required knowledge.

2. Seminars: (They Include)

Universidad de Navarra

1. Lectures on current topics by the Professor or by a guest lecturer who might be a practitioner or expert of the field.
  2. Group presentations on a topic related to the subject. The students have to choose from a list of topics provided by the Professor. Students will be divided into groups of 5-6, and are required to conduct a thorough investigation of their topic and make presentation before the class in a format of their choosing. Each presentation will be followed by a discussion.
  3. Responses to students questions by the Professor and classmates.
  4. Discussion of the pre-assigned reading at the end of every class.
3. Evaluation: Exams to assess the successful accomplishment of the objectives.

II. PERSONAL WORK

1. The students have to devote regular study hours outside of the lectures to gain the maximum from the subject.
2. The students are compulsorily required to come prepared to class having read the pre-assigned reading in order to fully understand the lecture. The students should also be able to display their understanding of the reading and the lecture through their engagement with the instructor and other classmates during the lecture.
3. The students are required to study the powerpoint slides provided by the instructor, take notes during the lecture to use it for study, and also study the compulsory readings assigned for the subject.

EVALUACIÓN

FINAL EXAM	50%
MID-TERM EXAM	20%
GROUP PRESENTATIONS	20%
CLASS PARTICIPATION, DEBATE AND DISCUSSIONS	10%

Class Participation and Debates: 10%

The students will be assessed for active participation and engagement in the classroom. The participation and performance of the students in the debates and discussions initiated by the professor at the end of every class, will also be assessed. Students will also be judged for class preparation and regular reading of course material.

Mid-Term Exam: 20%

A partial exam will be conducted in the middle of the semester. Please refer to the chronogram to check the date. The student is required to study everything taught in the course until the date of the exam. The exam will be a combination of Multiple Choice Questions .

Group Presentations: 20%

The most important role of theory is to help us understand and make sense of the world around us. Therefore in order to test the understanding of various theories taught in this course, the students will be required to make presentations of case studies through the prism of the various theories of IR.

The students will be divided into different groups for this exercise, and the teacher will randomly assign a case study to each group. A list of case studies based on major past and current international events will be provided by the teacher. Detailed instructions regarding the presentation and the criteria for evaluation will be provided during class.

Final Written Exam: 50%

The final exam will and will consist of a series of questions in which the student must demonstrate the acquisition of factual and theoretical knowledge and conceptual clarity acquired from the content taught in class. The exam will also evaluate whether students can translate theoretical concepts into practical application. The written exam will include long essay type questions and multiple choice questions. The students need to study the slides provided by the Professor and the compulsory readings for each topic. The students need to study the entire content of the course, including the part covered in the partial exam.

Criteria to pass the course

- Students whose final grade is 5 points or more will pass the course.

Universidad de Navarra

- Students whose final grade is below 5 points will not pass the course and will be graded as Suspense.
- Students who do not take the final exam will not pass the course and will be graded as No presentado.

Exams review

- Students will be able to review the exams in an interview with the professor, after publication of the grades, in a day and place that will be indicated.

CONVOCATORIA EXTRAORDINARIA

- If the students fail to attain a GPA of 5, and does not pass the subject, they will get another chance to write a single exam in June. This exam will be worth 100% of the total grade of the subject. If the student does not pass this exam either, they will have to retake the subject the next academic year.
