

INTRODUCTION

Please take note that this syllabus will undergo revisions before the fall semester begins, but the overall direction and emphasis of the course will remain unchanged.*

This course aims to familiarize students with the fundamental concepts, analytical methods, and theoretical approaches that are central to the subfield of comparative politics. The discussions will be organized around essential questions and topics that shape comparative research, while also critically examining the strengths and weaknesses of different theories. Given the limitations of a single semester, it is impossible to cover a specific topic or the entire subfield comprehensively. Therefore, this course serves as an introduction to comparative research and encourages students to delve deeper into the subject matter.

All the required articles and book chapters will be made available in electronic format. Occasionally, I will also provide additional readings. These issues will be discussed on the first day of class.

- Degree: International Relations + IR&Law + IR&History
- ECTS: 6
- Year, semester: 2nd year, Autumn semester
- Type of course: Required
- Instructor: Aurken Sierra Iso, Ph. D. Assistant professor
- Language: English
- Lecture schedule: Tuesdays, 17:30 - 19:30 (Lecture hall 11, Amigos); Wednesdays 17:30 - 19:30 (Lecture hall 1, Amigos).
- Final exam: December 5th, Aula 11, 8:30-11:00

LEARNING OUTCOMES (Competencies)

CORE COMPETENCIES

CC2 - Ensuring that students are able to apply their knowledge to their work or vocation in a professional manner and possess the competencies typically demonstrated through the development and defense of arguments and problem-solving within their field of study.

CC3 - Equipping students with the ability to gather and interpret relevant data (usually within their field of study) to make judgments that include reflection on socially, scientifically, or ethically relevant issues.

CC4 - Enabling students to effectively convey information, ideas, problems, and solutions to both specialized and non-specialized audiences.

CC5 - Developing the necessary learning skills for further studies with a high degree of autonomy.

GENERAL COMPETENCIES

GC01 - Analyzing, evaluating, and reasoning different international situations based on acquired knowledge.

GC02 - Negotiating, mediating, persuading, and communicating firmly in the field of international relations.

GC04 - Using English correctly with the scientific and academic terminology specific to international relations.

GC05 - Being able to orally express oneself correctly and appropriately on international topics.

Universidad de Navarra

GC08 - Skillfully handling new information and communication technologies and applying them to international relations.

SPECIFIC COMPETENCIES

SC02 - Analyzing the nature and characteristics of relationships among international actors, particularly among states.

SC03 - Understanding and comprehending the main elements that define a state's foreign policy.

SC06 - Distinguishing the different competencies and functions of the state, international organizations, and non-state actors in the international system.

SC13 - Familiarity with and analysis of contemporary political theories and ideologies.

SC16 - Analyzing different international conflicts, their causes, development, and effects on countries and the international society.

SC21 - Evaluating possible solutions to international conflicts.

SC23 - Analyzing the political, legal, socio-cultural, economic, and technological environment as a determinant of industrial and business activity in any country in the world.

CONCEPTUAL OBJECTIVES OF THE SUBJECT:

The main objective of this course is to equip students with the necessary conceptual foundation encompassing various approaches to social inquiry in comparative politics, as well as different substantive subfields within the discipline. Additionally, the course aims to furnish students with a toolkit of analytical skills that they can employ to comprehend and critically assess current matters in comparative politics. By the end of this course, you should be capable of:

- Explain and evaluate what comparative politics, as a subfield, is about.
- Critique approaches and articles, and identify weaknesses, using your own insights on those of other approaches.
- Pursue further study of or research on related topics such as conflict studies or developmental studies.

How to maximize your learning experience

- Be prepared to read, think and discuss... a lot.
- Know that I have very high expectations of your work and that you should as well.
- Schedule appointments to meet with me to discuss your progress, writing, and understanding of course material. I am always willing to help.
- Plan to come to class every day and remember: 'To be early' is to be on time, to be 'on time' is to be late, and to be 'late' is just unacceptable.

Interactive lecture

An important aspect of this class will involve active class participation, which will entail discussing the assigned articles, critically analyzing theoretical approaches, and engaging in meaningful interactions with your peers. Therefore, it is crucial that you thoroughly read the assigned required readings before each class session. During the lectures, I will provide general theoretical and topical overviews, as well as cover key terms and principles that are addressed in the readings. It is expected that you complete all the required readings by the specified dates, as this will enable you to actively contribute to the class discussions.

To read efficiently, it is recommended that you avoid reading the text word by word in a meticulous and comprehensive manner. Instead, skim through the introduction and conclusion, if available, to identify the author's main argument(s). Then, scan the section headings (or the first sentence of each paragraph) to understand how the author develops and supports their argument. Finally, focus on detailed reading only for those sections that provide clarification or offer supporting evidence for the argument. If you find yourself spending more than three hours on a set of readings, it indicates that you are reading too closely. Additionally, allocate some time for reflection and contemplation on the readings:

Universidad de Navarra

- What is the author's main argument?
- What evidence is used to support the argument?
- Is the argument and evidence compelling? Are there alternative explanations?
- How does the reading relate to previous ones covered in the course?
- Why are we reading this?

Participation

Active and mandatory participation is a fundamental aspect of this course. Your responsibilities include:

1. Coming to class having thoroughly read the assigned material and actively contributing to class discussions.
2. Staying updated with relevant news related to our topics.
3. Engaging in critical reflection on concepts and articles we encounter.

Transforming a conventional lecture-style class into an engaging and insightful seminar requires the collective and interactive participation of every student. Therefore, the quality of your learning experience hinges on vibrant and respectful exchanges of thoughts and criticisms. Your grade will be based on the quantity and quality of your participation, as well as your attendance. It should be evident that attending class is crucial to earning a high participation grade. Below are the defined criteria for different qualities of comments. Comment Quality:

- “High”: Comments show reflection about the reading or the discussion at hand, contribution through strong points and/or adding value to the discussion by stating their opinion based on factual knowledge.
- “Satisfying”: Comments show engagement in class discussion, willingness to “take a guess”, and ability to link previous lecture material to discussions at hand, as well as expressing opinions.
- “Low”: Comments show engagement in class discussion, but the student never contributes to the added value or demonstrates knowledge from the readings – they are just working for that tick mark.

Competency and skill objectives of the subject that the student must develop:

- Develop the capacity to analyze issues of current events.
- Develop the ability to understand and produce international political information.
- Develop a critical spirit towards contemporary political reality.
- Develop the skill to organize complex communicative knowledge in a coherent manner and its interrelationship with other social, human, and technological sciences, as well as with the methods and techniques of these disciplines.

Use of laptops & other electronic devices

All class material is provided electronically, so extensive use of laptops for note taking is not necessary and can be done by hand. Therefore, the use of any electronic device during class is strictly prohibited and will only be allowed under special circumstances. If you need to use an electronic device for medical reasons, please let me know. Lastly, smart/cell phones should be set to silent, not vibrate.

PROGRAM

The course is divided into three sections to provide students with a comprehensive understanding of comparative politics.

In the first section, students will be introduced to the foundations of comparative politics. They will explore the core concepts, including the state, nationalism, and ethnic identity. Moreover, they will gain insights into the methodologies and approaches used by social scientists in studying politics. This section aims to give students a solid grasp of the fundamental principles and tools necessary to analyze and compare political systems.

Universidad de Navarra

The second section focuses on political institutions, regime types, and the dynamics of regime change. Students will examine the structures and functions of political institutions and governments. They will delve into the characteristics and workings of democratic regimes, such as the definition of democracy, the origins of democracy, and the institutions that underpin democratic systems. Case studies will be utilized to explore different models of democracy, including parliamentary, presidential, and semi-presidential systems. Nondemocratic regimes, including totalitarian and authoritarian systems, will also be analyzed, with an emphasis on understanding their origins and mechanisms of control. The section concludes with an exploration of regime transitions and the role of political violence and social movements in shaping political transformations.

The final section of the course addresses a range of special topics in comparative politics. Students will examine electoral systems, exploring their impact on political representation and decision-making processes. They will also delve into the complexities of political violence, understanding its causes, manifestations, and implications for political stability. Additionally, the course will explore various dimensions of political systems, such as civil society, social movements, and their role in shaping democratic processes. The section will also touch upon the challenges and prospects for democratic development in different regions around the world.

Through this course, students will develop a comprehensive understanding of comparative politics and the analytical frameworks used to study it. They will gain the ability to critically analyze political systems, institutions, and processes across different countries and regions. By examining core concepts, studying real-world case studies, and engaging with special topics, students will acquire a nuanced perspective on the complexities and dynamics of politics in a comparative context. Overall, the course aims to equip students with the knowledge and skills necessary to navigate and understand the diverse political landscapes of our interconnected world.

Topics

Topic 0 - Introduction

Topic 1 - The State

Topic 2 - Nations and Societies

Topic 3 - Political attitudes and Ideologies

Topic 4 - Democratic regimes: The basics

Topic 4 - Democratic regimes: Types of democracy

Topic 5 - Political parties

Topic 6 - Electoral systems

Topic 7 - The logic of belonging

Topic 8 - Political culture

Topic 9 - Nondemocratic regimes

Topic 10 - Political violence

EDUCATIONAL ACTIVITIES

I. CLASSROOM TEACHING ACTIVITIES

Universidad de Navarra

1. Lectures (60 hours)

Lectures by the professor on Thursdays and Fridays. These classes will cover the most important aspects of the programme. Students should come to these classes having read the texts provided by ADI. The materials used in class —such as slides— will be uploaded to ADI at the end of the topic.

2. Group meetings (1 hour)

Students are required to submit a written report by November 15, prior to the end of the course. To complete this report, regular meetings with their peers will be essential, and optional meetings with the instructor are also available for additional guidance.

3. Exams (5 hours)

Exams to assess the successful accomplishment of the objectives.

- Midterm: 2 hours
- Final: 3 hours

II. PERSONAL WORK (84 hours)

- Personal study: 50 hours (readings) + 24 hours (revise).
- Monitoring and analysis of political information and its correlation with the course content: 10 hours.

ASSESSMENT

ORDINARY CALL

The final grade for the course will correspond to the teacher's overall assessment of the student's achievement of the planned objectives. In any case, it is essential to pass the multiple-choice test in order to pass the course.

The assessed activities and criteria will be:

Class attendance and participation (10%): Active participation and answering questions related to mandatory readings, complemented by weekly online quizzes (WR).

Written Report (20%): Students will work in groups of four or five to produce a Comparative Case Report (6–8 pages) due on November 15. The report must follow the guidelines provided in class and on Blackboard.

Exams (70%)

- Midterm exam (20%)
 - 50–60 multiple-choice questions.
- Final exam (50% or 70%): If the midterm exam is passed, the final exam will count for 50% of the final grade. If the midterm exam is failed, the final exam will automatically be worth 70% and will act as the only exam.
 - The final exam will consist of two parts:
 - Part 1 (80% of the exam grade): 50–60 multiple-choice questions.
 - Part 2 (20% of the exam grade): one short essay question (choice between two). Students must achieve a passing grade in the multiple-choice section; the essay alone cannot ensure a passing grade.

RESIT

Universidad de Navarra

The retake in June will consist of a single exam which will account for 100% of the subject. This exam will consist of two parts:

- Part 1: a multiple-choice test of 60 questions.
- Part 2: up to three essay questions.

Repeating students must take the course in the same way as first-year students.

Criteria to pass the course

- Students whose final grade is 5 points or more will pass the course.
- Students whose final grade is below 5 points will not pass the course and will be graded as Suspensa.
- Students who do not take the final exam will not pass the course and will be graded as No presentado.

Exams review

- Students will be able to review the exams in an interview with the professor, once the grades have been published.

OFFICE HOURS

Aurken Sierra, Ph. D.

- Office 0621
- Sánchez Bella building, Ground floor, left corridor.
- Office hours: Mondays 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. and Wednesdays 1 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. by appointment (write to aurken@unav.es or schedule a meeting here).

BIBLIOGRAPHY AND RESOURCES

Some handbooks:

- Boix, C. & Stokes, S. 2007. The Oxford Handbook of Comparative politics. Oxford: Oxford University Press.
- Caramani, Daniele. Comparative Politics. 2nd ed. Oxford : Oxford University Press, 2011.
- O'Neil, P. H., Fields, K. J. & Share, D. (2020). Essentials of comparative politics, Seventh Edition | New York: W.W. Norton & Company.
- O'Neil, P. H., Fields, K. J. & Share, D. (2021). Cases and concepts in comparative politics, Second edition | New York: W.W. Norton & Company

All the required articles and book chapters will be made available in electronic format. Occasionally, I will also provide additional readings. These issues will be discussed on the first day of class.*

Other books:

- Gómez Antón. (2003). 7 potencias : instituciones políticas e historia reciente (1945-2000) (4a ed.). Ediciones Internacionales Universitarias.
- Mellone. (2003). Richard Gunther, José Ramón Montero e Juan J. Linz (a cura di), Political Parties. Old Concepts and New Challenges. Oxford: Oxford University Press, pp. vii+371, Isbn 0-19-924674-2. Rivista Italiana Di Scienza Politica, 33(2), 342–344. <https://doi.org/10.1017/S0048840200027258>
- Gunther, Montero, J. R., & Linz, J. J. (2002). Political parties : old concepts and new challenges. Oxford University Press.
- Levitsky, & Ziblatt, D. (2019). How democracies die. Penguin Books.