

INTRODUCTION

Content management in a digital environment poses innumerable challenges from the point of view of how to make decisions regarding its dissemination and distribution, as well as the evaluation of its effectiveness. In this sense, media planning has been gaining prominence in the marketing and communication departments of companies, due to its impact on company results and its influence on growth and profitability. However, fragmentation, digitization and the emergence of new disciplines has greatly complicated the process of strategic planning and media buying, adding its own often arcane language and increasing confusion about this discipline. The subject of digital content management establishes a solid foundation for understanding the activity of the media, the different modes of dissemination and distribution of content, and its role in marketing communication processes.
