EDUCATIONAL ACTIVITIES

The Distribution of the student's workload measured in hours is the following:

Theory in-class periods: 15

Practical in-class periods: 15

Preparing for class/research/case solving: 15

Personal study (personal notes and notebooks): 30

The course's objective is to foster an understanding of the issues and challenges related to securities law and governance. More specifically, the course will draw out the multiple relationships that exist between a firm's strategic objectives, ownership structure and governance model. It will present United States and pan-EU applicable securities/corporate governance laws, rules, directives and practices, as well as a more detailed look at country-specific laws and regulations. Occasionally, other areas such as Asia and Latin America may be considered. As well, in order to prepare students taking the course for future professional challenges representing European or US multinationals, international investment banks and funds, and in start-up companies worldwide, reference will be made to key differences between general European standards and those that have developed in the US.

The course will build on this foundational overview of structures and functions by examining the legal aspects of securities transactions, operations and governance, including the various legal duties and rules that regulate various actors and the mechanisms used to enforce those rules. We will also examine larger legal environments that indirectly regulate the conduct of certain corporate actors by encouraging or discouraging particular conduct.

The purpose of the course is to enable students to develop:

- an analytical eye towards the relationship between corporate and securities law and firms' strategic objectives, ownership structure and legal governance model, and how that affects the management decision-making process; and
- an understanding of how choices relating to corporate legal governance and applicable securities laws and regulations bear an impact on international business transactions, their practices and the overall financial performance of firms, as well as the public policy considerations and goals underpinning current corporate and securities regulatory systems.

Students are required to be active participants in class lectures. Every student is asked to arrive at a lecture having reviewed and analysed any assigned course material beforehand so as to ensure active participation.

ASSESSMENT

CONVOCATORIA ORDINARIA

I. REACTION PAPERS

In order to give participants the opportunity to actively deal with and consider current issues of international securities law, class requirements include preparing two reaction papers (each of about three-pages in length). One will be due after the second week of classes, whilst the other will be due on the day of the final exam about a week after classes end. More information will be forthcoming on the connected readings and expectations concerning them. All together will be worth 20% of the final grade.

II. FINAL GRADE

The final grade for the course will be based 65% on the results of a final closed-book written exam (a mix of multiple choice and true/false questions) and, 15% on the reaction paper. Active participation in class will be worth 20%. For those sick or confined for other valid reasons, the final exam will instead be oral and online.

More information about the form of exam will be provided in class.

CONVOCATORIA EXTRAORDINARIA

June Re-sit/Make-up exam for Securities Regulation: For those who do not pass the course in the spring, your entire grade will depend on your retaking the exam in June. You will not have to redo the reaction papers.
