COURSE OVERVIEW

Course description: Based on preliminary ideas discussed on International Communication and Public Opinion, this course examines in-depth concepts, processes, institutions, and practices of current public diplomacy strategies. It will consider how policymakers, diplomats, and non-state leaders are adapting to the public dimension of international relations when addressing specific issues or targeting particular audiences. The emergence of non-state actors and the use of digital media platforms will be particularly analysed. The course will attempt to develop students' skills for critical analysis of central questions and issues in the field.

The final grade for the course is based on the elements listed below. Both the practical and theoretical sections must be passed in order to pass the course. Failure to achieve 5 points in either section will result in a retake in June.

ORDINARY SESSION EXAM

I. Theoretical part (Final Exam) - 50% of the final mark

It will consist of a number of questions in which the student must show the ability to connect ideas and demonstrate the acquisition of the theoretical knowledge taught in the subject.

Universidad
de Navarra

II. Practical part - 50% of the final mark

a) Group exercise with oral presentation (30%)

Working in groups, students will prepare an oral presentation on a public diplomacy topic. A list of possible topics will be provided (such as historical public diplomacy strategies, actors, and events), but students are also encouraged to research new topics on their own. Once a topic is chosen by the group, students must prepare and present the project to the rest of the class. The professor will guide both the selection of the topic and the subsequent discussion. The oral presentation can include graphs, pictures, audiovisual elements, and PowerPoint. Both the research and the presentation will be evaluated. The presentation will be followed by a debate moderated by the professor and attended by the rest of the students. The grade will be the same for all group members.

b) Class activities (20%)

EXTRAORDINARY SESSION EXAM

The grade of the practical part of the ordinary session will be kept. In case any of the practical parts is failed, the June exam will have more weight in the final grade:

- Final exam 50% (if the practical part has been passed)
- Final exam 70% (if the class exercises have not been passed)
- Final exam 80% (if the oral presentation has not been passed)
